Building on over a century of global innovation and leadership

Carrier's fire heritage is both extensive and longstanding. With world-class esteemed brands built on expertise and innovation, Carrier has been working with fire professionals and delivering solutions for well over a century.

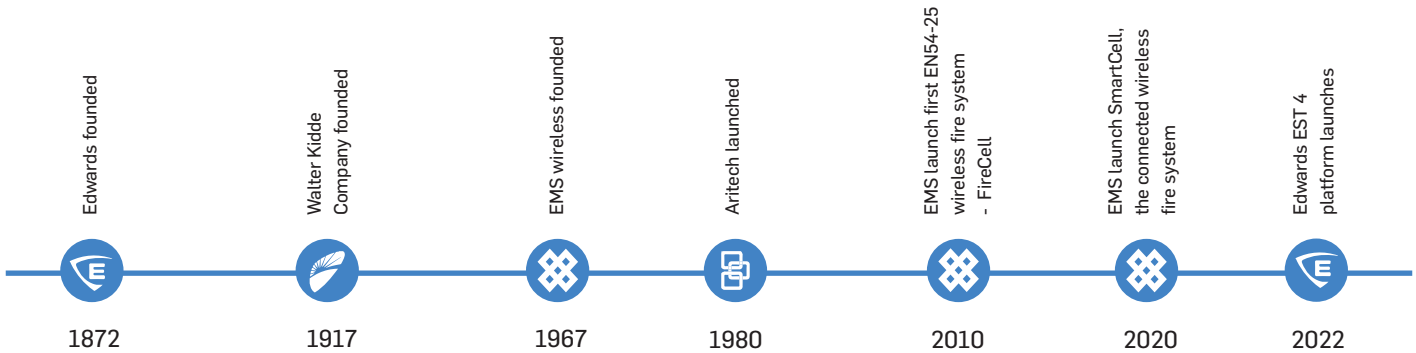

Our legacy began with Edwards. Founded in 1872 by Robert Edwards, he was the first to patent an electric bell in 1881. Today, Edwards is the "high-end" solution for major projects such as airports, shopping centres and complex estates.

Kidde was established in 1917, by Walter Kidde, with early patented developments including CO suppression in 1917, and CO extinguishers in 1924 and latterly, in 2013, the first manufacturer to offer carbon monoxide alarms, designed to last 10 years.

EMS has over 50 years knowledge of wireless and hybrid technology, and are acknowledged as the leading authority of this technology.

Supporting customers with solutions designed without compromise

With a determination for development, Carrier has a mission to be creative and resourceful, delivering modular and scalable solutions, which are technologically advanced, dependable and reliable, and without compromise whatever the property we are helping to protect.
